King receives Yemeni premier

N. YEMEN PREMIER: King Khaled Tuesday receives North Yemeni Premier Abdul Aziz Abdul Ghani who arrived in Riyadh earlier in the day on an official visit.

RIYADH, June 5 (SPA) — King Khaled Tuesday received North Yemeni Premier Abdul Aziz Abdul Ghani, who arrived here earlier in the day on an official visit.

The meeting was attended by Crown Prince Fahd, Second Deputy Premier and Commander of the National Guard Prince Abdullah, Defense Minister Prince Sultan, Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al-Faisal, the King's special adviser Dr. Rashad Pharaon, and the Saudi ambassador in Sanaa Sheikh Tarrad Al-Harithy.

On his arrival, Abdul Ghani was received by Prince Fahd, Prince Abdullah, Riyadh Governor Prince Salman, Sheikh Tarrad and other officials.

Abdul Ghani, who arrived here from Baghdad was accompanied by a large delegation which included Sheikh Abdullah ibn Hussein Al-Ahmar, member of the advisory council and chief of the largest tribe in North Yemen, Ali Lutf Al-Thawr, minister of development and planning, Hussein Al-Amri, minister of foreign affairs.

In a statement to SPA the Prime Minister said his visit would further consolidate the already excellent Saudi-Yemeni relations and would deal with the latest developments in the Arab world to coordinating attitudes and policies.

Iran claims Iraqi warplanes attacked two villages, killing 6

TEHRAN, June 5 (Agencies) — Iraqi fighters crossed the Iran border in Kurdistan Monday and attacked two villages, killing at least six people, the governor general of West Azerbaijan Province claimed Tuesday.

Mohammad Abassi said the fighter planes strafed and bombed the villages of Gursbeh and Sarbeh.

Informed sources in the Kurdish city of Sanandaj said the Iraqis were apparently in pursuit of Kurdish guerrillas who had crossed over the frontier.

Government officials in Tehran were not immediately available for comment on the reports.

Abassi said that the final death toll in the attack was not known but said 11 houses had been damaged.

Informed sources said that among a number of wounded was a member of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan (PUK), led by Jalal Talebani. This could not be immediately confirmed.

Reports of the attack came at a time of border tension between Iran and Iraq in the southern Iranian province of Khuzestan, where autonomy-seeking ethnic Arabs last week clashed with local Persian militia.

Both sides denied reports that they had concentrated on the border, but reports were prevented from reaching the frontier in Khuzestan to make an independent check.

The Kurdish border has long been a problem area for both Baghdad and Tehran and relations between the countries were only normalized in 1975 after the Shah agreed to drop his support for Kurdish separatists on the Iraqi side of the border.

The tense situation in Khuzestan last week gave rise to a spate of anti-Iraqi propaganda posters attacking Baghdad's Baath Party leadership.

The official Voice of the Islamic Revolution radio claimed that Iraqi helicopters had crossed the border in Khuzestan on reconnaissance flights and had moved troops up to the border but this was denied in Baghdad.

Meanwhile, Iran's second ranking religious leader voiced support Tuesday for his country's Arab minority which is seeking greater autonomy.

"Arabs in Iran have suffered extreme injustices under the Shah and should not continue to be deprived of their rights under the revolution," Ayatollah Sayed Kazem Shariatmadari said in an interview with the Kuwait newspaper "Al-Anbaa".

Shariatmadari said he had protested against the "ill treatment" which the religious leader of Arabs, Ayatollah Sheikh Muhammad Khagani, had received at the hands of revolutionary committees, but he accused "foreign elements" to have contributed to the clashes in Khuzestan.

In Tehran, hundreds of thousands of people transformed a rally Tuesday from a commemoration of revolutionary victims into a display of support for Ayatollah Khomeini, Iran's top religious and revolutionary leader.

The rally followed criticism of Khomeini in recent weeks by a variety of political and religious figures, who have claimed democratic freedoms are being ignored in the country and that Iran is slipping toward a dictatorship.

Similar rallies were staged in major cities around the country, benefiting from a national holiday declared by the government. State radio said slogans supporting Khomeini predominated everything.

Ghanaian officers' coup said successful

LONDON, June 5 (AP) — Rebel officers apparently led by a left-wing air force officer, Flight-Lieutenant Jerry Rawlings, declared late Monday night they have overthrown Ghana's military government and control the main military barracks, according to Radio Accra reports monitored here.

After a day of confusion in which it appeared at one point the coup had failed, Lt. Gen. Joshua Hamidu, describing himself a chief of defense staff, said in a broadcast he was in the radio station "to confirm that the army headquarters, first brigade headquarters, Burma Camp, are under the control of the revolutionary forces and supporting forces."

There was no reference to Ghana's second infantry brigade, stationed at Kumasi, 100 miles north of the capital. Burma Camp, the main barracks, is on the outskirts of Accra.

Nor did Hamidu say what has happened to Maj.-Gen. Rov Koei, who was named chief of defense staff last July.

In two almost identical broadcasts against a background of military music, Hamidu said: "To avoid further bloodshed I am appealing to you all to lay down your arms and return to barracks and cooperate with the revolution. Long live Ghana."

At 2300 GMT, Accra Radio closed for the night and said it would be back on the air Tuesday at its normal opening time.

Earlier Monday, rebels seized the radio station and ordered loyalists barricaded in the Accra police headquarters to surrender or be attacked by warplanes, broadcasts monitored in Lome, capital of Ghana's neighboring state, Togo, said.

Broadcasts throughout the day, including late night casts monitored in London, referred to Rawlings as being in control. A 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew was imposed in the capital, the radio said.

The coup is Rawlings' second attempt in three weeks to seize power. He was jailed after the mid-day attempt, and Radio Accra broadcasts said he was freed Monday in a rebel raid on the jail.

Sadat announces arms deal with China; attacks critics

ISMAILIA, Egypt, June 5 (R) — President Anwar Sadat announced Tuesday he had concluded a deal with China which Western diplomatic sources said involved a large shipment of Chinese-built MiG aircraft.

Sadat announced the deal at a meeting with officers and men of the Egyptian armed forces near this Suez Canal city.

"It gives me great pleasure to take this opportunity to announce to you that China has concluded a deal with us." Sadat said.

He gave no details of the deal, but the Western diplomatic sources said agreement was for Chinese-built MiGs. They could give no further information on how many planes were involved or what type of MiGs they were.

In Peking, there was no immediate Chinese comment on Sadat's announcement.

Sadat said he would thank the Chinese leadership on behalf of the armed forces "for this deal, for this aid devoid of ulterior motives."

His speech also contained previously-announced details on arms deals with the United States involving Phantom and F-5E jet fighters.

Sadat's announcement of the Chinese deal came during a long review of how he had overcome the Soviet arms embargo on Egypt imposed because of bitter political differences between Cairo and Moscow.

The Soviet Union was Egypt's chief arms supplier for many years but Sadat decided to diversify his source of arms after the Soviet embargo was imposed in 1974.

Sadat said Tuesday that Egypt now had deals with Britain, France and the United States.

"After taking the decision to diversify our sources of weapons, France and Britain sold to us," Sadat said, and added that Egypt was also buying Phantom and F-5E aircraft from the United States.

"Now we have Britain, France and the United States. It gives me great pleasure to take this opportunity to announce to you that China had concluded a deal with us ..."

Sadat's speech was made to mark the fourth anniversary of the reopening of the Suez Canal, shut for eight years following the 1967 war.

The purchase of the American F-5E aircraft was originally to have been financed by Saudi Arabia but after conclusion of the Egyptian peace treaty with Israel Sadat said he believed the Kingdom would not pay for the planes.

He said then he would go to the American people for the money for the deal which was for 50 of the aircraft.

He did not mention how many of the Phantom planes he hoped to get but said some would be in Egypt in time for the Oct. 6 military parade which marks the anniversary of the 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

Sadat said the Arab Industries Organization (AIO), a consortium of Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) to develop an Arab arms industry, would be replaced by a new body with the same aims — the Egyptian Organization for Arms Industrialization.

Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the UAE are winding up the AIO in protest against the treaty.

Sadat also lashed out at his Arab critics — all Arab states except Oman, Somalia and Sudan have broken diplomatic and other relations with Egypt over the separate peace treaty.

He said the treaty had already obtained the return of the Sinai capital of El-Arish and added: "We only wish that all those Arab rulers were with us who are boiling with defeat, hatred and bitterness. But this is how they behave."

"Those Arab states which had launched a campaign of abuse against Egypt after it started the peace process failed to understand Egypt's aims and we shall not give them a minute of our attention," he said.

"We shall equally not heed them now that we are going to start talks on Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip," he said.

"If the critics imagined that the fate of Egypt and the Arab nation would be left to the whims of those in Baghdad, Tripoli and Damascus they are wrong," he added.

Sadat, as he frequently does in his speeches, singled out Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi for personal attack.

Earlier Monday, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, after an unscheduled meeting with Sadat, described the Egyptian leader as "very optimistic, very sure of himself... and very firm on how he is implementing the peace treaty."

Sadat, Dayan said, is convinced that peace treaties between Israel and other Arab countries will come, "and that he is taking the right way. He has no hesitation in the full implementation of normalization."

Italy's political stalemate unchanged in spite of vote

ROME, June 5 (AP) — The election of a new parliament failed to break the Italian political stalemate Tuesday as the Christian Democrats made no gains and the voters rebuffed a Communist bid to enter the government.

The results of the nationwide voting Sunday and Monday bore out the predictions of pre-election opinion polls.

The communist share of the vote dropped four percentage points, the first time the showing by the biggest Marxist party in the West fell off in a national Italian election. The Christian Democrats and their allies in Washington were delighted by this. But once again the Christian Democrats will be forced to seek support from the Socialists to govern, and they were demanding half the cabinet seats.

The nagotiations to form Italy's 38th postwar government were expected to stretch deep into the summer. Party leaders said no meaningful bargaining could start until after the election next Sunday of representatives to the European Parliament.

The Christian Democrats won 262 of the 630 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, one less than they won in the last national election in 1976 and 52 short of a majority. They got 14,007,594 votes, or 38.3 per cent, compared to 38.7 per cent in 1976.

The Communists lost 27 seats in the lower house, winning 201. They got 11,107,883 votes, or 30.4 per cent, compared to 34.4 per cent in 1976.

The Socialist were third with 62 seats, a gain of five, and 9.8 per cent of the vote, compared to 9.6 per cent three years ago. The neo-fascist MSI was the only loser among the smaller parties, coming in fourth but dropping from 35 to 30 seats.

The rest of the lower house will include 20 Social Democrats, 18 Radicals, 16 Republicans, 9 Liberals, 6 Proletarian Unity, 4 South Tyrol Volkspartei, 1 Christian Democrat-Liberal, and 1 local party.

Of the minor parties, the Social Democrats, Republicans and Liberals are prospective coalition partners for the Christian Democrats. But they won a total of only 45 seats, seven short of the number needed for a bare majority.

Voting for the 315-seat Senate ran about the same. The Christian Democrats got 38.3 per cent of the vote and 138 seats, a gain of 3; the Communists got 31.5 per cent and 109 seats, losing eight, and the Socialists got 10.4 per cent and 32 seats, a gain of three.

Also winning Senate seats were 13 neo-Fascists, 9 Social Democrats, 6 Republicans, 2 Liberals, 2 Radicals, 3 South Tyrol Volkspartei and 1 Christian Democrat-Liberal.

The division of votes for the two houses differed because the minimum voting ages were different — 25 for the Senate and 18 for the Chamber of Deputies.

Communist Party Secretary Enrico Berlinguer, who forced the election two years head of schedule by withdrawing his support from Premier Guilio Andreotti's minority Christian Democratic government last December conceded his forces suffered a "considerable loss."

He said the party will, "fight to preserve the interests and rights of the working masses."

U.S. criticizes Israel on settlement decision

WASHINGTON, June 5 (Agencies) — The United States "deeply regrets" an Israeli cabinet decision to establish a new West Bank settlement, the State Department said Monday night.

The Israelis voted Sunday to permit a new settlement near Nablus, a major Palestinian city 30 miles from Jerusalem.

"The establishment of new settlements is harmful to the peace process. It's particularly regrettable with negotiations just beginning to establish a new relationship between Israel and the West Bank," said State Department spokesman Hodding Carter.

"We hope the parties will forego any actions detrimental to the peace process."

Carter said the State Department was trying to confirm reports that the new settlement will be on privately-owned Palestinian land seized by Israel, rather than on land which had been controlled by Jordan as state property before Israel occupied it in 1967.

"The takeover of private property would add another distressing dimension" to the settlement, Carter said.

Carter's protest was the latest in a long series of U.S. statements deploring the settlement programs of various Israeli governments. The official American position is that the settlements are violations of international law which prohibits settling in occupied territory.

The Israelis claim that the West Bank is part of the "historical land" of Israel and that no Arab government has a legal claim to it.

Carter said there were no U.S. plans to take further steps against Israel, beyond delivering the portest.

The State Department spokesman also condemned the assassination last Friday of the ranking religious leader in the Gaza Strip, Sheikh Hashem Husandar, who was an outspoken supporter of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine claimed responsibility for the killing.

PLO reaffirms readiness for dialogue with U.S.

KUWAIT, June 5 (R) — The foreign affairs chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), Farouk Kaddoumi, was quoted Tuesday as saying the PLO is ready to conduct a dialogue with the U.S. provided Washington recognizes it as the sole and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

In an interview with the Kuwaiti daily "Al-Rai Al-Aam," Kaddoumi added that any talks between the PLO and the U.S. should be conducted in public and at the highest level.

The U.S. should also recognize the national rights of the Palestinian people, Kaddoumi told the newspaper.

Kaddoumi reiterated the PLO's rejection of the proposed Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip and denounced the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel as a "surrender pact".

He said the Palestinian people would take decisive and firm action against anyone who supported the autonomy plans.

On Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiri's recent call for an Arab summit in Mecca to restore Arab solidarity, Kaddoumi said the suggestion should not have come from President Numeiri, because he wants the Arab League dissolved.

Washington meeting to study policy toward Gulf region

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 5 — President Carter's top foreign policy advisers will begin secret deliberations Wednesday on future U.S. policy toward the Arabian Peninsula and the Gulf, including the possibility of a stepped-up military role in the region, informed sources told "Arab News".

The president's policy review committee, chaired by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, has scheduled meetings for June 6 and 13 to discuss a wide range of U.S. policy options for the Gulf region in the wake of recent American setbacks in the area, the sources said.

The policy makers, meeting in the underground "situation room" located beneath the White House, are expected to engage in an intense and sometimes heated debate over whether to expand the American military presence in the oil-rich areas of the Middle East, a move strongly advocated by the military and by some members of the National Security Council staff, according to the sources.

Vance and other State Department officials are said to oppose a dramatic increase in U.S. military strength in the Gulf region.

Among the ideas to be discussed Wednesday and next week:

— The creation of a 100,000-man quick reaction military strike force to be used for desert warfare and protection of oil installations. This force, to be airlifted to the Middle East in the event of crisis, was recommended by President Carter over a year ago. Sources believe if the concept is adopted, the force will be smaller than originally envisioned.

— The establishment of a new U.S. military command for the Middle East. At present, American military operations in the Middle East are controlled by the U.S. Command in Europe. If a Middle East command is set up, it is not likely to include any permanent combat units. Instead, the commander-in-chief would draw on specially earmarked units from other commands as the situation warrants. The Defense Department is said to favor the appointment of Maj. Gen. Richard Lawrence as the American commander-in-chief for the Middle East.

— Maintenance of a significant American naval presence in the Indian Ocean and Arabian Sea. This could include the creation of a permanent aircraft-carrier force—the so-called "fifth fleet."

— Expansion of U.S. naval and air facilities at Diego Garcia, an uninhabited island in the Indian Ocean. Pentagon planners have been considering "pre-positioning" material and logistical support units at Diego Garcia so as to be able to sustain a Gulf operation if the need arose.

— Intensified joint military consultations and planning exercises with friendly Gulf countries.

Secretary Vance and his aides are expected to oppose vigorously any proposals for permanent U.S. bases in the Gulf region or formal alliances with friendly states.

U.S. embassies in the region voiced unanimous opposition to such suggestions in a recent poll taken by the State Department.

But Vance's opposition to a major American military build-up in the Gulf may be a minority view at Wednesday's strategy sessions. The Joint Chiefs of Staff and the NSC staff, who favor a more actively interventionist policy are receiving moral support from Congress, itself increasingly sympathetic to the prospect of overseas military action.

JEDDAH, June 5 — Saudi Arabia's first petrochemical project, a plant at Jubail to produce 656,000 metric tons of ethylene, will cost around $ 7 billion, Saudi Basic Industries Corporation Chief Executive Abdul Aziz Al-Zamel said Tuesday.

Zamel told "Al-Riyadh" newspaper that the project's cost will be shared equally between SABIC and its joint venture partner, Shell Oil Company of the United States.

An agreement will be signed within five months, Zamel said.

The plant, which will take three years to build, will produce from the ethylene base 295,000 metric tons of acetylene, 454,000 MT of ethylene dichloride, 281,000 MT of ethanol and 355,000 MT of caustic soda.

The Jubail desalination plant, which will be the largest in the world, will produce 130 million gallons of drinking water and 21 megawatts of power, the paper said.

t OPEC conference this month

Iraq seeking to protect Third World on oil

BAGHDAD, June 5 (R) — Iraq will press a two-part proposal to cushion developing countries against the effects of higher oil prices and inflation.

The Iraqis will make their move at the Geneva conference of oil-exporting states later this month.

A senior oil ministry official said that contacts with other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) showed support for the proposal.

Under the plan, oil-exporting countries would bind themselves to increase their aid to developing countries in proportion to any increase in the oil price while industrialized oil-importing countries would increase their aid to match their domestic inflation.

Iraq first put forward its proposal at the recent United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) in Manila where the issue of rising oil prices provéd a major stumbling block.

Dr. Awni Al-Ani, director general of foreign relations at the Oil Ministry, said Monday that Iraq hoped that the OPEC ministers meeting in Geneva on June 26 would adopt a long-standing proposal for oil prices to be denominated in a basket of major international currencies instead of in dollars.

This would cushion oil-exporting states against the effects of inflation in the West and Japan. Countries like Iraq have frequently defended the demands for big oil price rises by pointing to the cost to their economies of paying inflated prices for Western technology.

Iraq, long a hawk among OPEC states in pushing for price rises of 20 per cent or more, has recently emerged as a champion of an orderly pricing policy.

It wants an end to the welter of premiums being charged unilaterally by various oil states taking advantage of the world shortage of oil that has followed the Iranian revolution.

"We don't want to abuse a situation in which you can sell crude for 40 dollars on the spot market if you want," Ani said.

"We have always asked for increases based on inflation and devaluation, but to jump prices because of temporary circumstances is not in the interests of OPEC."

He said Iraq hoped there would again be a standard marker price for OPEC crude after the Geneva meeting, but would not say what Iraq thought it should be.

Asked about reports abroad that vast new reserves of oil had been discovered in the Rumailah field in southern Iraq, Ani said that his ministry's policy was to be extremely cautious in estimating reserves.

But, he added with a smile: "We have good hopes."

Mauritania's new government reviews policy toward Sahara

NOUAKCHOTT, June 5 (R) — Mauritania's new government met Monday to review its policy toward the Western Sahara conflict, the apparent cause of Sunday's resignation of President Moustapha Ould Muhammad Salek.

Reliable sources said Lt. Col. Salek replaced as president by Lt. Col. Ahmad Mahmoud Ould Souly, resigned after the country's ruling 19-man supreme military council rejected his policy of seeking peace with the Algerian-backed Polisario guerrillas.

The sources said that with 8,000 Moroccan troops still stationed in Mauritania in spite of a truce in the Sahara war, they feared the repercussions of Salek's plan to renounce publicly Mauritania's claim to its part of the Sahara, ceded by Spain to Morocco and Mauritania in 1976.

Algeria has rejected the division of the Sahara between Morocco and Mauritania and backs the Polisario fight for the independence of the phosphate-rich territory.

The Moroccan monarch and Kodjo discussed a recent clash between the Polisario guerrillas and Moroccan forces.

Syrian troops exercise

DAMASCUS, June 5 (AP) — Syrian forces Monday conducted military exercises somewhere in Syria, the official Syrian Arab News Agency (SANA) reported.

Syrian Defense Minister Lt. Gen. Mustafa Tlass, who supervised the maneuvers, praised the "fighting capabilities and combat readiness" of the troops involved in the war games, the agency said.

Tlass called on officers and soldiers of the Syrian Armed Forces to be always "ready for the decisive battle against the enemy to liberate the occupied Arab territories, especially Jerusalem," the agency added.

The city was reported to be in the hands of the central government forces after three days of bitter clashes with disgruntled Arabs seeking autonomy and a greater share in the oil industry.

Turkey, Greece sign first tourism cooperation pact

ATHENS, June 5 (AP) — Greece and Turkey Tuesday signed their first ever tourism cooperation accord, also marking the first agreement of any kind between the two hostile neighbors since 1971.

The agreement was signed between Greek Tourism Secretary-General Panayiotis Lambrias and visiting Turkish Minister of Information and Tourism, Dr. Alev Coskun. The visitor was repaying a trip to Turkey made earlier this year by Lambrias.

A Greek tourist office spokesman said the two sides agreed to form a mixed committee to promote tourism between them in general, and particularly in the sea domain such as Eastern Aegean Sea.

The agreement also specifies that the two countries should exchange tourism publications and films, and simplify traveling procedures for tourists moving between their borders.

Greece and Turkey have tourism potential, which has however often been upset by the friction prevailing between them.

Iraqi Embassy said under siege in Aden

NICOSIA, June 5 (Agencies) — Baghdad radio reported Tuesday that its embassy in South Yemen was under siege by heavily armed troops following the assassination of an Iraqi lecturer in Aden.

The Aden government has accused Iraq of being behind the killing of Tewfik Rushdi and demanded the killers be turned over by the Iraqi Embassy.

Baghdad radio said South Yemen's Foreign Minister Muhammad Saleh Mutee had warned Iraqi Ambassador Faez Asoni that the embassy would be stormed unless the demands are met.

The radio said the Iraqi Foreign Ministry had denied that any embassy employees were involved in the mysterious killing Saturday night.

The South Yemen government alleged that the assassins escaped in a car with diplomatic license plates registered to the Iraqi Embassy.

The Iraqi government maintained that the license plate number of the getaway car did not correspond to any used by the embassy in Aden and that the killing was the work of an unidentified group intent to harming relations between the two countries.

Meanwhile at the United Nations South Yemen said Monday it has protested to Iraq over the alleged murder by Iraqi security men of the Iraqi professor.

Murder attempt against Saleh, Ismail denied

BAGHDAD, June 5 (AP) — North Yemen's Prime Minister Abdulaziz Abdulghani denied Tuesday a Beirut press report of an abortive assassination attempt against the presidents of the two Yemens.

Abdulghani was quoted in the Iraqi daily "Al Jumhoria" as saying that the summit meeting between the two presidents was not, as reported, canceled because of any plot, according to the agency.

Abdulghani, however, gave no reason for the cancellation. The prime minister ended a brief visit to Iraq Tuesday.

Vorster's fall delights blacks, liberals

Vote today will test Afrikaner government

JOHANNESBURG, June 5 (R) — Shaken by the humiliating resignation of President John Vorster Monday in South Africa's "slush funds" scandal, the government Wednesday faces a crucial test of its public standing in a parliamentary by election.

Ironically, the election, at nearby Randfontein, has been forced by the resignation of one of the principal figures in the scandal, former cabinet minister Connie Mulder.

The government had hoped to delay the release of the latest official report on the scandal until after the vote.

But Monday's publication of the report, and its condemnation of Vorster for covering up the scandal, will give the public a chance to express its feelings about the affair.

The leader of the opposition New Republic Party, Vause Raw, said in a statement Monday night that the Erasmus Report had exposed a nightmare of lack of control and maladministration which allowed corruption to flourish.

Urging people to vote against the National Party, Raw said it presented an opportunity for voters to pronounce their judgment.

Black leaders Tuesday greeted the resignation of Vorster with enthusiasm, with many insisting that other National Party leaders also quit to force changes in the system that would improve the lot of blacks.

One black lecturer insisted the resignation "is not sufficient. Let the whole government resign."

"The changing of Afrikaners in power does not affect us at all," another professional man said.

As prime minister for a dozen years, Vorster did ease "petty apartheid," opening up public facilities to all races. But he denied blacks property rights in "white" South Africa and relegated them to homelands slated for eventual independence.

"He will be remembered for the clinical and ruthless manner in which he suppressed black opposition to his party's policies in this country," the black newspaper, the "Post", said in an editorial.

The liberal English-language, "Rand Daily Mail", predicted that the psychological impact of Vorster's fall "will be immense."

John Vorster commanded a position of unrivalled preeminence among his people. He dominated the scene as no one before him, commanding a loyalty and admiration which was formidable. He was the Afrikaners' de Gaulle."

The newspaper said Vorster "did more than anyone else to violate the rule of law and trample on the institutions and practices of democracy of South Africa — first as minister of justice, then as prime minister."

More groundings ordered

Cracks found in DC-10 wings

WASHINGTON, June 5 (AP) — Federal officials, concerned that improper maintenance procedures may have produced a crack and led to the nation's worst air crash, have grounded nearly two dozen DC-10s.

The grounding was ordered after similar cracks were discovered in two jets that had gone through the same procedure.

They were found during inspections ordered by the Federal Aviation Administration after the Chicago crash of American Airlines Flight 191, which went down after an engine fell off May 25. On March 30, that DC-10 had undergone the same "engine removal and reinstallation procedure" that apparently led to the cracks in the other two planes.

The engine removal and reinstallation on all three planes was part of routine maintenance, the FAA order said.

Ed Slattery of the National Transportation Safety Board, said it was conceivable the "existing crack" could have caused the failure of the pylon assembly holding the engine to the wing on Flight 191, but the board had not yet reached a conclusion on a specific cause.

Only those U.S.-registered DC-10s which have had their engine pylons removed and reinstalled after completion of the most recent FAA-ordered inspection are affected by the directive, said FAA official John Leyden. He estimated that fewer than 20 of the 137 DC-10s may be covered by the action, the third grounding in a week for some.

The cracks were found in the aft attachment points of the pylons, or engine mounts. Slattery did not believe the Chicago accider caused by the crack discover the pylon of the downed plan he said board members wer cerned enough to recom inspections.

Investigators found a 1 crack in the aft attachment of the pylon that separated the engine that fell from American Airlines plan Chicago. Simialr flaws were in the other two planes.

The Board said the crac the latter two planes were a ently caused during ro maintenance because pers used improper proced removing the engine and its in one section. It urged imme inspection of all planes hand this manner and recomme that in the future the two sec be removed separately, as scribed in manuals.

Laundered funds to U.S. magnate

Study details Pretoria's media infiltration

JOHANNESBURG, June 5 (AP) — American publisher John McGoff received loans totaling $ 11,350,000 from a secret South African propaganda fund for attempts to buy into American newspapers and a British television news service, a government report said Monday.

The final report of the Erasmus Commission into the far-flung "Muldergate" scandal said that $ 6,350,000 of the loan was still missing and "no one knows what happened" to it.

In a lengthy chapter on McGoff's connections with the now-defunct Information Department, the commission said that the initial loan of $ 10 million was given McGoff in 1974 to support his bid to buy the "Washington Star."

The money was passed to McGoff in the guise of a loan from a Swiss bank. The "Star" deal fell through but McGoff, apparently without South African permission, used $ 6 million of the loan to help buy the "Sacramento Union."

He subsequently received another loan of $ 1,350,000 to buy a 50 per cent share in UPITN, British Television News producer. The other owners are United Press International and Independent Television News.

McGoff, 54, is president of Panax Corp., which owns six daily newspapers in Michigan and more than 40 weeklies. He also heads Global Communications, which owns two daily newspapers in California and the 50 per cent share in UPITN.

Tracing McGoff's links with the Information Department, the Erasmus Commission said the conservative publisher first visited South Africa in 1968 and "discovered an affinity with South Africa and her people..." His host was Les de Villiers, a senior official of the Information Department.

The report described McGoff as a personal friend of former Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford and said he arranged a meeting between the South African information minister and Ford when the latter was vice president.

In 1974, the commission said, McGoff approached the Information Department about trying to buy the "Washington Star." The proposed deal was for South Africa to provide $ 10 million and McGoff would put up $ 15 million.

The $ 10 million was transferred in September 1974 to the Union Bank of Switzerland in Zurich, then to Thesaurus Continental Securities Corp., a subsidiary of Union Bank, and through Thesaurus to McGoff's Global Communications.

"Because the project was so sensitive, however, the idea was to channel the funds from Thesaurus to McGoff in such a way that it would appear to be a legal foreign loan," the commission said.

The loan was thus made to appear interest-free from Thesaurus.

McGoff visited South Africa and talked to Eschel Rhoodie, head of the information projects and now a fugitive abroad, about using some of the $ 10 million to buy the "Sacramento Union." Rhoodie told the commission he agreed only to let McGoff use interest from the loan.

Carter told of Europe's worry over oil import subsidy scheme

WASHINGTON, June 5 (Agencies) — French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet told President Carter Monday that European countries were seriously concerned about American moves to secure a greater share of world supplies by subsidizing heating oil imports, as Chancellor Helmet Schmidt left Tuesday for talks with Carter in Washington.

After his meeting with Carter, Francois-Poncet told reporters that the American decision would drive up world oil prices

The White House meeting was dominated by discussion of an Energy Department ruling announced last week providing a$ 5 a barrel government "entitlement" on imported heating and diesel oil.

The declared aim of the move, which the United States denies is a government subsidy, is to build up domestic home heating and diesel oil stocks.

In a prepared statement the French minister said: "As president of the Council of Ministers of the European Communities, I told him (Carter) of the serious preoccupation felt in Europe regarding the decision..."

"This decision tends to divert towards the United States a larger share of the oil sold on the world market."

Energy Department officials have said their decision was necessary to channel supplies from the Caribbean and Canada to the American market.

Energy problems are likely to dominate the discussions between Schmidt and Carter.

The surprise American decision on heating oil import, made without consultation with America's European partners, has caused intense irritation in Bonn.

Schmidt has frequently complained about what he calls the unpredictability of the Carter government and officials in Bonn say the latest decision offers a classic example of this.

Schmidt told "Time" magazine this week that competition for dwindling oil and natural gas supplies could lead to war.

But Francois-Poncet, asked whether he was lodging a protest of the heating oil plan, said, in English, that he had only given "an expression of a worry."

Asked whether the subsidy would drive up oil prices, he said "it could be one of the factors."

The subsidy is on the agenda for a meeting between Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and his French counterpart.

After his White House meetings, the foreign minister went to the State Department, where he had lunch with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Meeting reporters afterwards, Francois-Poncet said the energy problem had occupied most of the discussions.

He also said France supports the forthcoming Salt II treaty in principle, but will withhold final approval until it completes a study of the text, which has not been released.

He said that the United States and France agree on the major points of policy toward Lebanon. "We discussed the problems of helping Lebanon toward a political roundtable and unity," he said, Carter is due to meet Schmidt Wednesday. They will also discuss this month's seven-nation summit conference in Tokyo.

U.S. prosecutors probing suspected oil crime cases

WASHINGTON, June 5 (AP) U.S. federal prosecutors are pursuing 39 cases of suspected criminal wrongdoing in the oil industry, a top U.S. Justice Department official told Congress Monday.

John Keeney, a U.S. deputy assistant attorney general, said that in the majority of the cases, lawyers "have been proceeding toward felony prosecutions" involving charges of conspiracy, mail and wire fraud and false statements.

In a very few instances, he said, cases referred to Justice Department lawyers by the Department of Energy involve "purely regulatory violations" of DOE pricing regulations.

Peace pact may weaken Israel ban, expert says

AMMAN, June 5 (R) — The Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty can break the 31-year-old economic boycott imposed on the Jewish state by the Arabs, a leading Iraqi economist has said.

Fakhri Kaddouri, secretary-general of the Council for Arab Economic Unity, Monday told a council here that this could come about since the treaty made Egypt a vital market for the Israeli economy.

The pact, he explained, links Israeli withdrawal from Sinai with the establishment of normal economic and political relations between Cairo and Tel Aviv.

The boycott dates back to the creation of Israel in 1948.

Kaddouri called for a tightening of the boycott and warned that the treaty threatened Arab economic unity.

The secretary-general urged new measures against the Egyptian government at the 11-member council's first meeting in the Jordanian capital since its headquarters was transferred here after the signing of the treaty.

M.E. CONCESSIONS

The farcical exchange between Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Egypt's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butros Ghali is the political equivalent of a third-rate wrestling match. It is hardly convincing.

While talking of compromise, Dayan boasted that Israel will not endorse or allow the establishment of a Palestinian state, and that Jerusalem will remain "the united capital of Israel." He also reminded Ghali and his compatriots that the Jewish state will pursue its "right" to build more settlements in occupied territory.

Ghali disagreed "completely" with Dayan's point of view. But, in spite of that, he maintained his belief that "through negotiations and more negotiations, we will overcome all difficulties."

We don't question that.

But in the Egyptian view, negotiations have become synonymous with compromise, and there is every reason to believe that the negotiations will see Egypt accepting Israel's terms. "All the difficulties" will be overcome. The question is at whose expense?

The Egyptian president has backed down from all his public definitions of his vision of Middle East peace. It is too agonizing to repeat them against what is now being peddled as peace. The Egyptian leader, throughout his offensive leading up to the Camp David accords, insisted that he would not accept a separate treaty, would not abandon the Palestinians, would not establish relations with Israel until a comprehensive peace was achieved, would not...

The list was endless. Unfortunately, the commitment to it was not.

On almost all the issues negotiated, Egypt has conceded long-held principles and promises.

Egypt has now entered negotiations on Palestinian autonomy, and judging by its track record, it is possible that the Palestinians — even in their present unenviable position — are better off left alone. For their case would then remain an open one with no risk of another Egyptian-Israeli deal to seal their future.

Egypt is now attempting to make a trade-off with something that does not belong to it.

It would be far wiser to leave things as they are. Egypt's self-proclaimed patronage over the Palestinians and their future is uncalled for and dangerous.

Egypt has shown an alarming generosity in its dealings with Israel and it will no doubt retain its mood in negotiations over the future of the Palestinians. But enough damage has been done in the name of peace and compassion for Palestinians and Arabs. Let's leave it at that.

Flaunting the SALT accord

By Robert Kaiser

WASHINGTON— Despite earlier American complaints about the practice, the Soviet Union recently again encoded radio signals from a test flight of one of its SS-18 intercontinental missiles in an apparent attempt to deny intelligence information to the United States.

News of this incident of what the experts call "encryption of telemetry" was leaked in Washington by persons hostile to the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union. One such source said the incident was a serious example of Soviet deceit and American weakness in dealing with the Russians.

Carter administration officials said they also perceived a serious example, but they called it an example of "irresponsible leaking." The recent incident was not related to a new agreement with the Soviets — to send uncoded radio messages from rocket tests — that is relevant to verification of the SALT agreements, the officials insisted.

The first account of the incident to surface publicly came from John Lofton, a conservative journalist, who asked a question at a White House briefing about a recent SS-18 test in which, he said, 29 of 31 radio channels sending information on the test back to earth had been put into code by the Soviets.

Several hours after Lofton asked his question — which White House officials declined to answer — a Senate aide critical of SALT 11 called a reporter to say there was a good story behind Lofton's query. Later the same aide volunteered some details

George Will, a columnist who has written critically of SALT, later referred to the test in a question he asked on "Meet the Press."

According to senior administration officials, the incident occurred in early April, and involved one or two SS-18 tests. Different senior officials remembered the number differently.

The test or tests were repeats of similar Soviet experiments last July 29 and Dec. 21, the sources said.

All these tests involved a warhead for the SS-18, the Soviets' biggest missile that carries just one large thermonuclear weapon. "The Soviets have been having trouble with that warhead," one source said.

Until last July the Soviets had left the complex stream of information radioed back to earth from its rocket tests uncoded, and U.S. intelligence could pick it up with relative ease. In a test flight more than 1,000 channels of radio information are sent back to earth, reporting on the functioning of every aspect of the rocket and warhead during its flight.

In these three SS-18 test episodes, however, the Soviets put into code all the information coming from the reentry vehicle, which carries a rocket warhead or warheads back into the earth's atmosphere after its flight through space.

This concerned the U.S. SALT 11 negotiators, and led to prolonged discussions with the Soviet side. Finally, the Soviets accepted the American position that encoding these radio messages would be prohibited under SALT 11 if the messages in question relate to a new or modified ballistic missile.

Those who first publicly revealed the latest incident of encoding on an SS-18 test suggested that the Soviets were flaunting whatever new agreement had been reached. The Senate aide critical of SALT who suggested pursuing the story said the Russians once again had taken advantage of an American government overeager to patch together a SALT agreement.

The administration disagreed sharply. It was said on a high level that the recent SS-18 test came before the two sides had reached an agreement on the encoding issue. Moreover, the United States didn't care whether the test data of an old system like this SS-18 was encoded" as one official put it."

The important question, officials said, was encoding telemetry from tests of new or modified missiles, since SALT 11 includes restraints on the introduction of modifications or new systems. U.S. eavesdropping devices and spy satellites can identify a familiar test of an old system even if some telemetry is encoded, the officials said.

"The Russians accept our position on new and modified missiles," one official said. "That's what matters."

The skeptical Senate aide disagreed, and also suggested that the April incident was more significant than portrayed by the administration. The Senate aide questioned whether the United States can be sure a test involved an old missile system if some of the tell-tale information on the test was hidden in a code.

No one involved in this story wanted his name to be mentioned in the paper. —(WP)

Evictions in El Arish

By Dial Torgerson

EL ARISH, Egypt — With deportations, evictions and investigations of collaborators, Egypt has resumed its administration of El Arish, provincial capital of the Sinai peninsula.

Even before Israel formally ended its occupation here last Friday the Egyptians had ordered the deportation of 154 Palestinian families — perhaps 1,000 persons — who had come to El Arish from the Israeli-held Gaza Strip.

Egypt gave no explanation of why the Palestinians were deported. However, the reason was believed to be either an extreme shortage of good housing in El Arish or because the Palestinians had come here from Israeli-controlled territory.

A Bedouin Palestinian leader said that many of his people were being evicted from homes they occupied in the city after 1967, when the Israelis captured the city. The Bedouins are seeking other homes here or returning to the desert.

Egyptian officials told a reporter that investigations were being opened into activities of El Arish citizens who collaborated in harmful ways with the Israeli occupation forces.

Ahmad Abdullah Dangir, mayor of El Arish since 1970, was fired and a mayor from Egypt appointed to take his place. Dangir had asked to be kept on in the post, to which he was appointed by the Israeli military government.

A Palestinian journalist was told by Egyptian authorities here that no action would be taken against El Arish citizens who work for the Israelis in administrative jobs, including scores of teachers. He was told:

"We are only investigating those who collaborated in harmful ways — for instance, who went to the Israelis with stories to tell them, informing on their neighbors."

It was reported by Israeli papers that Egypt was replacing scores of policemen who had served during the Israeli occupation with officers being sent from Egypt.

Egypt's presence has become pervasive here. Every Hebrew sign has disappeared and Egyptian flags and soldiers and portraits of president Anwar Sadat seem to be everywhere. El Arish looks as Egyptian as if the Israelis had never been there.

But reporters here for the recent summit meeting between Sadat and Israeli Prime Minist Menahem Begin noticed that crowds, which ha been ecstatic Friday at the lowering of the Israe flag, were smaller Sunday and their pro-Sad chants less enthusiastic. Most of the spectators we bedouin, not Egyptian.

One reason may have been the presence thousands of soldiers, arrayed in the full regal favored for Egyptian military displays — preside tial guards in white uniforms with red trimming black boots and blue berets; a score of noisy moto cycle police as escort; khaki-clad troops surroun ing Begin's guest house by the Mediterranean, on every few yards, facing out. Who were they guar ing Sadat from, some residents wondered, if not th people of El Arish?

And, though Begin and Sadat announced th there would be an open border between Israel an Egypt, the people of El Arish have been told quiet that it will not apply to them.

About 5,000 El Arish residents have become ing in Israel. Egypt had been expected to allow th wage earners of El Arish to continue crossing in Israel to work. But, it was reported here, Sadat do not want them earning vastly more through the Israeli connection than workers in Egypt. If the border will be closed to workers.

Egyptian authorities inherited a difficult housi situation when the Israelis withdrew. Many of th thousands of El Arish people who fled to Egy during the Israeli conquest of 1967 now want return, but their homes have been taken over people who did not leave.

The Egyptian administrators who were taki over the city — having arrived several days befo their official takeover — began ordering out th Palestinians and Bedouins. The Bedouins had com to El Arish from the Sinai Desert to share in th jobs and houses available there after the Israe took control. The Palestinians — originally di placed in the 1948 Arab-Israel war — had move from the Gaza Strip.

About half the Palestinians deported had arriv here between 1967 and 1971, and the rest in 197 when the Israeli military government widened na row lanes through the Gaza camps into bro avenues, simplifying security but making hundre homeless. The Israelis allowed those who k homes to move to El Arish or to new homes in Ga outside the camps. — (LAT)

France and the new Europe

By Ronald Koven

PARIS — A radical change in the French political landscape, with the Centrist followers of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing teaming up with the Socialists and the Gaullists joining the Communists in opposition, is an idea whose time may be coming, the European election campaign has demonstrated.

The French political world was so startled by results of a poll showing that this is what the voters would like, that the results became the prime topic of conversation in Paris political circles even before their publication.

The poll by the pro-Socialist newspaper "Le Matin" showed that 69 per cent of Giscardist voters would like to drop Gaullists from the government coalition and replace them with the Socialists. Only 17 per cent opposed the idea among Socialist voters, perhaps even more surprisingly, 52 per cent favored dropping unity efforts with the Communists and teaming up with the Giscardists. This was opposed by 28 per cent of the Socialists.

It has been an article of faith among the Socialists that their party's sharp decline in the 1960s was a direct result of the late Premier Guy Mollet's leading them into anti-Communist third-force coalitions that ruined the Socialist image as a leftist party.

The "Matin" poll explicitly linked the prospect of a political realignment to the issue of Europe.

After Giscard returned from a state visit to the Soviet Union recently, he invited French Communist leader Georges Marchais and Socialist leader Francois Mitterrand to come to the Elysee palace for a personal report on his Moscow talks, Mitterrand accepted and Marchais refused.

Giscard did not even invite Gaullist leader Jacques Chirac. Much to the publicly expressed horror of Gaullist moderates, including those in the cabinet, Chirac has publicly questioned whether Giscard can continue to claim "legitimacy" as president.

To French ears, that came across as a declaration of intent to unseat the president. "Legitimacy" was the key world that Charles de Gaulle used first against the legally established Vichy government that collaborated with the wartime German occupiers and later against the Fourth Republic that the Gaullists overthrew in 1958.

Chirac, French commentators almost universally agree, has effectively turned the European elections in France into the first round for the next presidential elections scheduled in 1981.

Mitterrand still makes ritual disclaimers on the steps of the Elysee that talking civilly with the president does not mean there has been any change in his opposition. Yet it is a constant paradoxical truth of French politics that the best way to destroy your opposition and keep it destroyed is adopt its policies.

At a Socialist Party conference in April, Mitterrand aligned with his party's pro-Communist left-wing to crush a challenge from Michel Rocard, Socialist leader closest to Giscardism. Many Fren analysts suspect that Mitterrand will now seek guarantee that Rocard never rises again preempting him with a rapprochement with G card.

But Mitterrand must handle any flirtation w Giscard very gingerly since the two men presu ably are going to run against each other in the 19 elections. Mitterand must make sure that the Soci ist list he heads in the European elections does well or almost as well as the Giscardist one, lest Socialist leader's prestige be damaged before presidential campaign.

Giscard has taken a position above the fray, co plaining that the party leaders have been attacki each other in a great "hurly-burly" without rega for the real issue of the elections, the future Europe.

But even Giscard, who always has given impression of being a convinced "European," had to concede more and more ground to the growing influence in France of Charles de Gaul antipathy toward anything that might diminish French nation-state.

Gaullism has taken over the French vocabul to the point that no leader or publication of importance refers to the Common Market's legis tive body in Strasbourg as the European Par ment. Everyone in France uses the supranationalist-sounding title European Asse bly.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt p voked a major political storm in France last when he said that the direct elections would ine ably lead to greater powers for the Strasbourg bo Ever since, other West European leaders h taken care to avoid saying anything that wo arouse the French Gaullists.

The Gaullists and the Communists bo been exploiting traditional French xeno their campaign. It is sometimes hard to di between Communist and Gaullist electo aganda against alleged West German domina Western Europe and opposing the enlarge the Common Market to Europe's new democra — Spain, Portugal and Greece.

They were previously barred as dictatorsh But the Gaullists and French Communists now they want them kept out because their olive and oranges will compete with French far ducts and because their membership could more foreign workers in France at a time of re unemployment.

Speaking in Alsace, the bilingual French vince over which France and Germany fought centuries, Giscard tried to reassure French citi who fear West German domination by saying France that is destined to lead the New Eur (WP) saudi press review

"There is nothing new about Dayan's declarations in Cairo on occupied lands, Jerusalem or the rights of the Palestinians "Al-Jazirah" said.

"The only novel development is that he made them so shamelessly in the heart of Egypt in the presence of Egyptian officials and shortly before meeting Sadat while 40 million Egyptians listened in. Dayan did not even care that he might be embarrassing his newly found friend Sadat who keeps hammering the notion that the so-called self-government plan for the West Bank and Gaza would eventually lead to an independent Palestinian state.

"The explanation lies in that neither Sadat nor his regime appear capable of being embarrassed any more. They have signed the separate peace treaty and are determined to go it alone and normalize relations with Israel despite the latter's insolent remarks.

"It is sad to conclude that Egypt and Israel see eye to eye on the main issues and agree on the need to deny the Arabs their rights. The least that Sadat could have done was to ask Dayan to leave the country at once," the paper said.

In a commentary on Real Estate Development Fund, "Al-Jazirah" deplored the practice of " giving large loans to wealthy people here because they use the fund's money interest free and deposit their own money in commercial banks at high interest rates." The paper said that the Fund must examine "not only the feasibility of the project in question but also the applicant's real need for a loan.

"It seems that this check is not often applied."

"Despite massive government subsidies and efforts to control inflation, some merchants continue to exploit the market because they have not been firmly deterred," according to "Al-Jazirah." It gave examples of vegetables and fruits which fluctuate in price "sometimes two or threefold in as many days."

The same writer said that "-while the rest of the world has decided that diesel operated buses are harmful to health, our proposed public transport company sees otherwise. Well are we then immune to diesel pollution, dust and potholes," he asked.

"Okaz" welcomed government proposals to reduce the cost of local and international telephone calls as part of the overall official plan to check rising prices" and cut the burden of the average citizen. "The proposals include periods when subscribers will be able to call any local party free of of charge. So far the first phase of direct inter-city connections has been completed and the second and third ones are underway at a cost of SR.1,500 million which will ensure 10,000 channels covering all main cities and 95 per cent of the countryside."

Commenting on Dayan's visit to Cairo and his defiant remaks about the Arab demands for a just solution of the Mideast problem, "Al-Medina" said "it was an unmitigated insult to hear this man's remarks in the capital of an Arab country.

"This visit and the declarations he made will be a turning point in contemporary Arab and Islamic history. The humiliation has reached its apex," the paper said, "and there is no doubt anymore that the Camp David accords were a conspiracy to confiscate not only the Arab lands with their holy places but also to restrict the freedom of the Arab world to resist the dangers that beset it.

"Dayan's statement and the silence of official Egypt mean that allegations made in the past about Egyptian abandonment of the Arabs and their rights are no longer questionable. The conspiracy is clearly established and we should not waver in containing it and defeating its aim and purpose."

Commenting on the plight of residents of Al-Sabil street who are facing eviction because of demolitions, "Al-Medina" said "while demolitions may be necessary for town planning purposes, many of these people have received neither compensation nor alternative accommodation. Some sources say that it is not within the terms of reference of the municipality to pay but only to demolish, leaving residents homeless at a time when rents have soared manifold in the last few years. But this does not absolve the authorities concerned from their responsibility to these hapless people. They must be decently accommodated at any cost until permanent and reasonably priced accommodation is made available to them," the writer said.

Believe me they are 'haunted' — Okaz

Ramada barbecue : a sell-out

Mint tea on the patio

High jinks at the poolside

By Barry Reynolds

DHAHRAN — The tables are set around a spacious patio that could easily hold 400. The diners have been served soft drinks and helped themselves to a hearty barbecue that includes grilled U.S. steaks, Oriental kebab, chicken, corn-on-the-cob, baked potato, rice and a range of salads, sweets and fresh fruit.

The uninitiated at the Thursday-night barbecue at the Dhahran— Ramada Inn may be perplexed about the purpose of a springy pole laid across the shimmering water of the hotel's swimming pool. Until the call comes for volunteers. Then about 15 guests step forward : some in thobes, others in business suits. One — obviously a repeat performance — is barefoot and wears cut-off jeans.

The maitre d 'calls for silence and one after the other the candidates step forward to try their luck — catwalking across the pole. All but one takes the plunge, and the diners love it.. The lucky one who makes it across earns a free dinner for everyone on his table.

Later, a stout rope is thrown across the pool and two teams engage in a tug-of-war. The losers are again drenched, while the winners get a free meal. The evening closes with a draw for door prizes : two free meals, an expenses-paid weekend for two in Doha, and a score of offerings from the Ramada gift shop.

Ahmed Al-Dhubai, the hotel's sales manager, initiated the weekly "event" in April in an attempt to attract steady patrons in an increasingly competittive restaurant business here. It seems to have been a big success. At least one week the patio was full to capacity and a hundred would-be diners without reservations had to be turned away.

A big drawing card, beside the histrionics, is the price — SR35 for all you can eat, excluding soft drinks.

A Moroccan gentleman circulates through the patio serving delicious mint tea.

This lowest-price barbecue in town barely breaks even, but Ramada's general manager Carl Donnelly explains : "We hope to attract luncheon customers to our Falcon Room and to promote our other specials as well."

These include a "Lobster event" on Monday hights, with four lobster choices : Mornay, Madras, Thermidor and Belle View — for SR45. Another is Friday Brunch (SR 40 a head). It is designed for families, and parents can leave their children with supervisors in an adjourning recreation center, to be fed separately and entertained by puppets and clowns, treasure hunts and games. Under-fives are free ; five to ten-year-olds half the adult price.

"The idea, says Dhubai, "is to give the parents a peaceful Friday brunch — with entertainment for the kids as well."

Setting London's gold price

By Murray Seeger

LONDON — Twice a day in the Rothschild bank on St. Swithen's Lane in London's financial district, five young men meet to set a price for gold that influences trading all around the world.

The morning "fixing" starts at 10:30 in a paneled room where representatives of the five London gold dealers sit at individual desks holding open telephones in their hands.

Usually Robert Guy of Rothschilds, where gold has been traded since 1804, opens the meeting with a proposed price per ounce based on the morning volume of offers to buy and sell that his four dealers have received.

The other dealers pass the proposal to their trading rooms where other agents are in touch with customers and have order books filled with the morning bids. Depending whether their trading rooms have an excess of buy or sell offers, the dealers offer alternative prices.

"Flag up!" a dealer calls when he wants to talk with his trading room. He stands up a British flag while he converses and puts it down when he is finished, so that haggling can continue.

Usually by 11 a.m. Guy wraps his knuckles on his desk when a price balance has been reached, the red light outside the door which has barred outsiders is turned off and the dealers disperse to their own offices. The procedure is repeated at 3 in the afternoon, making bulletin news on the economic news wires that circle the globe within minutes.

The London gold price is the most important for trading in the world but it is not controlling. "We believe each major market sets its prices by its own conditions," a Zurich banker commented.

Seventy-five to 90 per cent of the gold buyers these days are investors or speculators who are convinced that the metal, despite its awkwardness, is a better investment than an instrument denominated in currencies.

As the dollar has fallen in value, gold has risen. Recently the price for gold in the strongest currencies, German marks, Swiss francs and Japanese yen, have also risen, suggesting an even greater crisis of confidence by some investors in money.

Much of the business is done by dealers acting for unidentified customers, but there is also a substantial clientele of "goldbugs" who do their own buying. — (LAT)

PENSIVE : A thoughtful Nadia Comaneci prepares to put on her shoe before competing in Monday's events.

Comaneci wins two titles at Tokyo gymnastics meet

TOKYO, June 5 (AP) — Romania's Nadia Comaneci, 1979 European and 1976 Olympic gymnastics champion, won two of the women's four individual events — the vaulting and floor exercises — in the 1979 gymnastics World Cup Tokyo Championships Monday.

Before 12,000 spectators, the 17-year-old Comaneci won the floor exercises with a perfect 20.00 points. She scored 10.00 points each Monday and Sunday.

The Romanian star won the vaulting horse by scoring 9.80 Monday for a total of 19.70 points, and was second on the balance beam with 19.60.

Emilia Eberce of Romania won the womens balance beam with 19.70 points, 9.80 Sunday and 9.90 Monday. She also shared the uneven parallel bars title with Steffi Kraker of East Germany with 19.65 points. Eberle scored 9.80 Sunday and 9.85 Monday while Kraeker had 9.85 and 9.80.

Soviet newcomer Stella Zakharova, who won the women's combined individual event Sunday, placed second in the vaulting horse with 19.525 points and in the floor exercises with 19.95 points. The 15-year-old Zakharova was third in uneven parallel bars with 19.55 points.

In the men's events, Alexander Ditiatin of the Soviet Union, who won the men's combined individual events Sunday, captured the rings title with 19.40 points. He scored 9.65 Sunday and 9.75 Monday.

Bart Conner of the United States won the side horse title by scoring 9.65 Sunday and 9.70 Monday for 19.35 points.

Shigeru Kasamatsu of Japan and Stoian Deltchev of Bulgaria shared the floor title with 19.45 points, both scoring 9.70 Sunday and 9.75 Monday. Fellow Japanese Eizo Kenmotsu captured the parallel bars title with 19.60 points. He had 9.80 both Sunday and Monday.

The men's vaulting horse title went to R. Baeroher of East Germany, who had 9.75 Sunday and 9.775 Monday for a total of 19.525.

Eberhard Gienger of West Germany captured the horizontal bar title with 19-55 points. He scored 9.80 Sunday and 9.75 Monday.

The eight best gymnasts in each event of the combined Sunday competed for honors in individual events — four events for women and six for men.

Nikolai Andrianov, winner of the 1978 world gymnastic championships, did not come to Japan for the Tokyo Championships.

England fields tested side for Sofia tie

SOFIA, June 5 (R) — England is firm favorite to win Wednesday's European soccer championship Group One qualifying match against Bulgaria.

England manager Ron Greenwood Tuesday announced the same side that beat Scotland, 3-1, two weeks ago, with the addition of Peter Shilton as reserve goalkeeper because Ray Clemence again hurt his ankle in training and may not be able to play.

As expected, Greenwood decided to stick with a proved line-up and did not bring in Trevor Francis, England's first million - pound footballer, who was not available for the last international.

At the center of the English attack is Kevin Keegan, the European Footballer of the Year, who helped take SV Hamburg to the West German League championship this week.

England has lost only one of 16 internationals since Greenwood took over as manager, but apart from West Germany, the nation responsible for the single defeat, the opponents have not been top-flight national sides.

Bulgaria, with only two victories in the last two years, has used 32 different players in its last four games in an effort to find a successful combination.

One of Bulgaria's problems is that until last month it was fielding what amounted to two national sides, one for the Olympic Games qualifying rounds and the other for the European Championships.

Now that it is out of the Olympics after a 4-0 defeat by Czechoslovakia last month, Bulgaria is expected to bring Roussi Gochev, the league's leading goal-scorer, into the side.

Head coach Izvetanilchev has still to name his side, but it is expected to be almost the same as the one that beat the Republic of Ireland, 1-0, last month.

With little more than national prestige to salvage from the competition, Bulgaria is relying on experience Wednesday. The average age of the squad is 28, and seven players are from national champion club Levski Spartak.

Asian athletics want Israel to race elsewhere

TOKYO, June 5 (R) — The Asian Amateur Athletic Association (AAAA) has decided to call on International Amateur Athletic Association to move Israel, an AAAA member, to some other regional group, Japanese sources said Tuesday.

The IAAF suspended the governing bodies of athletics in 21 Asian countries for two months after they defied an IAAF ban on competing in the Asian Games in Bangkok last December. The IAAF banned the Games because Israel was not invited.

Conteh uninspiring

LIVERPOOL, June 5 (R) — Britain's John Conteh outpointed unranked American Ivy Brown over 10 rounds here Monday night but it was a modest performance for a man who next month challenges Matt Franklin of the United States for the World Boxing Council (WBC) light-heavyweight title.

The 28-year-old Briton, fighting in his hometown, was actually decked after just 20 seconds by Brown.

Vilas disposes of Mayer to reach final 8 in Paris

PARIS, June 5 (AP) — Guillermo Vilas of Argentina quickly finished off Gene Mayer in a resumed match Tuesday and won 7-5, 1-6, 6-7, 6-1, 6-2 for a place in the quarterfinals of the French Open tennis championships.

Mayer, younger of the American brothers, led by two sets to one when the match was halted Monday night. But when it was continued on the center court of the Roland Garros Stadium Tuesday he won only three games in two sets.

Vilas, who has won the French title once and been runner-up twice in the last four years, qualified to meet Victor Recci of Paraguay in the next round.

So south America is certain to have at least one man in the semifinals. Also in contention is Hans Gildemeister of Chile, but he must first get past Bjorn Borg, favorite for the $ 49,000 first prize.

Cricket tourney reaches semis

BIRMINGHAM, June 5 (R) — Sri Lanka, Bermuda, Denmark and Canada Monday won through to the last four of the World Cup cricket qualifying competition.

In Wednesday's semifinals, Denmark will play Sri Lanka and Canada will face Bermuda. The winners will go on to join the six Test-playing countries — Australia, England, India, New Zealand, Pakistan and the West Indies — in the main competition which starts next Saturday.

UNCTAD praised in Manila

MANILA, June 5 (R) — Gamani Corea, secretary general of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development—(UNCTAD), said Tuesday he believed the recently-concluded fifth session here had been a significant process towards restructuring the world economy and spreading global wealth. Speaking on his departure after the four-week meeting, he said he was sure that the process would not fail to gain strength.

Some Olympic flights halted

ATHENS, June 5 (AP) — Half of Olympic Airways' international flights were grounded by a 48-hour strike that began Tuesday by the Greek national air carrier's flight engineers, a company spokesman said. But all domestic flights to the inland popular tourist resorts and islands were being conducted normally, the spokesman added, since 18 of the company's 128 flight engineers are not participating in the walkout.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	2♠	3♡	4♠
5♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead - king of clubs.

You may wonder how declarer lost a trump trick in this deal and went down one in five hearts. However, it all came about in a perfectly natural way.

The hand was played in New Orleans in the 1978 Open Pair World Championship. North, Ahmed Hussein, partnered by Omar Sharif and representing Egypt, opened the bidding with one club. They were playing five-card majors and Hussein therefore could not open with the more natural bid of one heart.

The East player was Leon Tintner, partnered by Nadine Cohen and representing France. He overcalled one club with two spades. This was theoretically a weak jump overcall and indicated a hand with six spades that lacked the high-card values for a normal opening bid of one spade.

Omar Sharif now boldly bid three hearts. He had only 5 high-card points and a dreadful heart suit, but he could not bring himself to pass.

West jump-raised her partner to four spades, and North — with powerful trump support — thereupon bid five hearts. That closed the bidding and Nadine Cohen, West, led the king of clubs and continued with the ace.

Now, resisting the temptation to lead a spade to her partner's ace, Nadine Cohen played a low club. This proved to be the straw that broke the camel's back. Tintner ruffed dummy's nine of clubs with the jack of hearts and Omar Sharif, despite all his histrionic skill, went down one before he could even get started.

Omar easily won the rest of the tricks. He ruffed the spade return, cashed the A-K of trumps and A-K of diamonds, then ruffed a diamond in dummy, establishing his remaining diamonds. However, his efforts were almost meaningless because he had unfortunately lost a trump trick even though he had started with a total of nine trumps headed by the A-K-Q.

ARIES
(Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
Stifle differences before they begin. A talk with a close one will clear the air. Later, you may be uncertain about joint investments.

TAURUS
(Apr. 20 to May 20)
Put that moneymaking idea to work, but avoid financial entanglements. A close ally may be indecisive or prone to wishful thinking.

GEMINI
(May 21 to June 20)
An excellent time to share mental interests with loved ones. Be protective of health and avoid misunderstandings at work.

CANCER
(June 21 to July 22)
You may have to revamp your thinking re a creative project. Private discussions with a family member go well. Make sure to keep confidences.

LEO
(July 23 to Aug. 22)
You'll reach an understanding with a friend, but it's not the time to invite others to your house. Postpone domestic entertaining.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
You have good ideas now about a career project with financial potential, but it's the wrong time for discussions with higher-ups.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Get in touch with those at a distance, but don't become involved financially just now. A trip may involve extra cash outlay.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
Careful research will lead to answers re a financial move, but it's too early to act. Avoid foolish expenditure in the p.m.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
Despite a good talk with a close one, you may have second thoughts later. Don't let suspicions mount or inhibitions take hold.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
You'll come up with a solution to a business problem, but you may not be at your best in a social situation. Avoid overtiredness.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
Talks with those as a distance go well; but it may be hard to maintain concentration on career interests. Don't get careless.

PISCES
(Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
Advisers may veto a project re domestic interests or offer suggestions contrary to your thinking. Distant interests may seem muddled.

The Outlook: A Wall Street Journal Column
By Richard F. Janssen

New York — (AP-DJ) — Having that gas station across the street is still handy, at least for armchair inflation-watching. About a month ago, its top price was described in this column as eye-opening at 97.9 cents a gallon. Now, at 1.04 9/10 the big black numerals loom even more like a warning sign than an inducement to buy. But the price sign is much less a deterrent than a scrawled plywood one often propped against the pumps, declaring no gas.

The gasoline situation is something of a special case, as it is linked to factors which aren't inherent problems of the U.S. economy, notably Iran's tumultuous transition to theocracy. So far, the authorities have been concentrating on the money side. The Treasury's fiscal policy is to reduce the budget deficit. The White House's incomes policy is to cajole companies and unions into limiting price and wage increases. Both these policies are aimed at making it more feasible for the Federal Reserve Board to apply its monetary policy in a way that slows the growth of the money stock.

Despite all this, consumer prices have been rising at a sinister 13% annual rate so far this year, even while economic output shows increasingly vivid signs of slowing into a recessionary stall.

Most people in the U.S. don't have first-hand experience of the 1930's depression, but they do care that after averaging only 1.6% yearly in the first two postwar decades, inflation in the 1970s has averaged 7%. With all the associated evils of being pushed into tax brackets initially meant for the rich, stubborn budget and trade deficits, lagging capital investment.

From this disparate but dismaying evidence, a powerful lesson is beginning to emerge — that policy makers must face up to the supply side of the economy. That is the opinion of President Jimmy Carter's treasury secretary, Michael Blumenthal.

Instead of just trying to 'fine tune' consumer demand, Blumenthal urges tackling the problems which hamper output, noting that the administration is already decontrolling oil prices to attract more domestic drilling, and deregulating transportation. Much more could be done, such as faster business tax write-offs to spur more factory construction, and removal of many semi-paralyzing rules.

Indeed, the U.S. is becoming less competitive against other countries because of its 'anti-production syndrome', contends Fed member Henry Wallich, who'd like to see the system changed to favor saving and investment instead of debt and consumption.

Resistance to such reforms is stubborn even in an upturn, yet a recession just might provide the crucial opening for an even more fundamental break with the old demand-management approach. This is still too sensitive for anything but very veiled hints from the administration, but it appear willing to see recession-level unemployment linger even after a slump.

The rationale is being developed at the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, as part of a major study led initially by Robert Ash Wallace, a key Treasury official under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson. His basic finding is that stimulating overall demand is such a stupendously inefficient way to fight unemployment that it may well account for much of this decade's extra amount.

In the past four years, he says, it has taken 'creation of 12 million new jobs to reduce unemployment by only 2 million'. That six-to-one ratio prevails partly because about half the jobless since 1970 'have been under the age 25, structurally unemployed because of the lack of training'. As he sees it, trying to pull them into productive work via overall stimulus would almost assure constant big budget deficits and rapid inflation.

This implies that fiscal and monetary policies should aim at a 'full employment' target of something like a 6% to 7% jobless rate (the May rate was 5.8%) instead of the current official goal of 4%. On the premise that no amount of stimulus and general boom would be enough to wipe out the super-high unemployment among black teenagers, for instance, he favors seeking the lower goal by more Federal efforts to directly benefit such groups.

Especially with an election year approaching, it remains very much in doubt how far the government will go in what Blumenthal calls 'a long-term transition from demand management to a rebuilding of our basic productive potential'. But as the gas station scene shows, the supply side can't be ignored with impunity any longer.

New York Bond Market: A Special Report
By Phil Hawkins

New York — (AP-DJ) — How do the various State bonds perform against one another in the market? That question is being asked frequently due to an unusually heavy slate of new State sales over the next two weeks. About 503 million dollars of bonds are being offered by six States.

On tap this week are sales of 100 million dollars by both Illinois and New Jersey, 65 million dollars by Ohio and 60 million dollars by California. Next week's offerings involve 118 million dollars by Louisiana and 60 million dollars by North Carolina.

A similar large new State supply became available in early 1978, prompting Edward Swanton of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. to rank the State bonds on the basis of their relative trading values.

Four States entering the market soon are ranked about equally by Merrill Lynch. They are Illinois, New Jersey, California and Louisiana, with the latter's position being noteworthy because, its bonds are rated double-A, while the three others are rated triple-A.

All four will probably offer their new issues at prices yielding about 5.7% by the 20-year bonds. Illinois might be forced to provide about a 0.05 percentage point higher return because its bonds tend to develop a price weakness when in large supply.

North Carolina's new 20-year bonds are likely to yield about 0.2 percentage point less than those four, or only about 5.5%. It is among the best in Merrill Lynch's ranking, along with Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, and Virginia.

Canadians affirm embassy to be set up in Jerusalem

OTTAWA, June 5 (R) — Canada's new government led by Prime Minister Joe Clark will stick to its pledge to move the Canadian Embassy to Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, according to External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald.

But no date has been fixed. "We will have to have a briefing on what, and how, and when that can be done," she told reporters Monday after she and other members of Clark's cabinet were sworn in.

Clark made the pledge to move the embassy to the occupied city of Jerusalem during the campaign for last month's general elections won by his Progressive Conservative Party.

"It will be done as Mr. Clark has indicated," Miss MacDonald said.

The promise provoked one Arab diplomat in Ottawa to say that if the move were carried out, Arab countries would have to strike back at Canada. He did not say how.

Canada's then prime minister, Pierre Trudeau, condemned Clark's statement as an irresponsible and a provocative act in view of the delicate situation in the Middle East.

The 53-year-old Miss MacDonald is the first woman to hold the foreign affairs portfolio in Canada.

Attacks

TEL AVIV, June 5 (R)—— Defense Minister Ezer Weizman has denounced attacks by Jews on Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank town of Hebron.

Replying to a question in the Knesset (Parliament) Monday Weizman noted that a number of residents of the Jewish settlement of Kiryat Arba outside Hebron had already been detained.

Police arrested four settlers Sunday for questioning after Palestinians complained last week that Kiryat Arba settlers had broken into houses belonging to Palestinians and beaten up the inhabitants.

Weizman also called on Jewish women from Kiryat Arba who took over a former Jewish hospital in the center of Hebron five weeks ago to leave voluntarily.

He did not say what action would be taken if they refused government appeals to leave.

Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren also issued a statement Monday, denouncing the action of what he termed a "band of Jewish hooligans" who had attacked Palestinians in Hebron.

Lebanon rightists protest attempt on Gemayel's life

BEIRUT, June 5 (Agencies) — The mountain region northeast of here staged a general strike Tuesday in denunciation of Monday's attempted assassination of Lebanese right-wing leader Pierre Gemayel.

Shops, factories and schools closed down in condemnation of the second bomb attack on a member of the Gemayel family in three weeks.

The 73-year-old Phalangist leader escaped with minor injuries when a powerful, remote-controlled bomb ripped through a motorcade in which he was traveling on a coastal road some 12 kilometers from the capital.

One man died from injuries and 15 others were treated in hospital.

The Phalangist radio said the general strike in the Christian Kesrouan-Ftouh region, took place despite Gemayel's appeal for self-restraint.

Pierre Gemayel was discharged a few hours later after shrapnel wounds in the skull were bandaged.

The Phalangist radio said Gemayel's "miraculous escape" had spared Lebanon a new disaster.

The strike covered the 800-square-mile Christian hinterland of Mount Lebanon in addition to East Beirut. No violence was reported.

Gemayel's two sons, who head the party's political and military branches, escaped similar assassination attempts earlier this year.

Phalangists have been involved in feuds with the rival right-wing militia of wartime President Suleiman Franjieh and with Syrian peacekeeping forces.

Franjieh accused Phalangists of murdering his son Tony, Tony's wife and three-year-old daughter along with 33 supporters almost a year ago.

Phalangists and their National Liberal Party allies of former President Camille Chamoun fought bloody confrontations with the Syrians since June last year.

In West Beirut, Palestinian commandos along with Syrian peacekeeping forces opened anti-aircraft fire on Israeli warplanes that buzzed refugee camps on the southern flank of the capital.

Palestinians fired from positions in the shanty town of Sabra, while the Syrians opened up from beachside positions.

To improve relations

Russia urges talks with China

MOSCOW, June 5 (R) — The Soviet Union reported Tuesday it had agreed to a Chinese call for talks on improving relations and proposed that delegations from the two countries meet in Moscow during July and August.

The Peking government said the Soviet message was "under study".

The official Tass news agency said the Soviet suggestion was contained in a message handed to Chinese Charge d'Affairs Tian Zengpei in Moscow Monday by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

The message, officially described as an aide memoire, was the fourth to pass between the two communist powers since April 3 when Peking first announced it was ready for negotiations aimed at normalizing ties with Moscow.

As reported by Tass and published in the Communist Party daily "Pravda," the message laid down no conditions that might give China reasons to decline to enter talks.

It said the discussions should be aimed at "the normalization and improvement of relations between our countries on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence, including the principles of equality, mutual respect for sovereignty, territorial integrity, no interference in each other's internal affairs and the non-use of force."

It also proposed that the two countries, between which the ideological schism first became public almost 20 years ago, should agree to renounce any claims to special rights or hegemony in world affairs.

In recent years both Moscow and Peking have accused each other of attempting to establish hegemony over different areas of the world, but particularly over Southeast Asia and the Far east.

If specific accords were reached, the Soviet message said, they should be recorded in an appropriate document to be adopted by both sides. But the wording of the message did not suggest this was a pre-condition for the talks.

500 bits will fall soon

Skylab is dangerous, NASA chief testifies

WASHINGTON, June 5 (R) — The National space agency said Monday there could be a one-in-152 chance of someone being injured when the giant Skylab space station breaks up and crashes to earth.

About 500 bits of debris, most under 4.5 kilos but two weighing more than 1,760 kilos, will rain down sometime between June 27 and July 21, National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) Administrator Robert Frosch told a Congressional hearing.

He said that if the 75-ton craft — the largest object orbiting the earth — appeared to be headed for densely populated areas it might be possible to maneuver it to a less populated region where the chances of injury would be one-in-1,500.

Frosch told the chairman of the House of Representatives Government Operations Subcommittee, John Burton (D-Calif) that in seeking to avoid a densely populated region such as India, NASA might move the orbit over the United States.

Skylab was launched in 1973 and was temporary home to teams of astronauts who carried out a wide range of scientific experiments. The craft lost altitude more rapidly than expected and delays in the space shuttle program made it impossible for astronauts to be sent aloft to boost it to higher orbit.

Frosch said most of Skylab was expected to burn up in the atmosphere but some 500 pieces might speed to earth in an area 6,400 kilometers long by 160 kilometers wide anywhere between latitudes 50 north and 50 south.

The State, Defense and Justice Departments were responsible for handling any assistance requests once Skylab came down and all injury claims would be promptly evaluated, he said.

The agency had considered asking the Soviet Union to help after Skylab began to lose altitude, but this had been rejected because of the problems of linking up Soviet spacecraft with Skylab, he told the hearing.

Frosch also rejected the idea of blowing up Skylab in orbit, saying this would send more and heavier debris to earth.

Opposition groups on strike

Nicaragua rebels step up offensive

MANAGUA, June 5 (AP) — Left-wing guerrillas pressed attacks across the nation Monday and opposition groups began a national strike aimed at forcing out the beleaguered administration of President Anastasio Somoza.

Sandinista National Liberation Front guerrillas reportedly controlled Chichigalpa, 85 miles northwest of Managua, and controlled most of Leon, the country's second-largest city, five miles south of Chichigalpa.

Heavy fighting was reported in the south along the border with Costa Rica, where the National Guard said it had launched a major offensive to crush the rebel drive.

There were no casualty reports.

Scattered clashes and the ambush of a guard convoy were reported in Managua, where the usually bustling streets were otherwise quiet because markets, taxis and bus drivers heeded the strike call.

The city's largest shopping center, Centro Commercial Managua, with 220 shops, was blocked off by chains.

Correspondents returning from Leon said the city was largely controlled by young rebels. The Sandinistas and National Guardsmen in the area said the rebels controlled the Leon airstrip, and the correspondents said National Guard aircraft could be seen strafing and rocketing areas near the airstrip.

Communication with Chichigalpa was cut off Monday morning, and a correspondent for the opposition newspaper "La Prensa" reported from the city that rebels controlled all of it but the guard outpost.

Telephone calls that got through to Chinandega, seven miles from Chichigalpa, found that city quiet. Heavy fighting was reported from El Viejo, a town north of Chinandega.

Correspondents returning from the northwest said guardsmen told them a convoy bringing a Sherman tank to Leon was ambushed in the early morning. The tank carrier was disabled and still sat by the side of the road but the tank could be heard firing its cannon in downtown Leon in the afternoon, they said.

In Managua, a National Guard convoy was ambushed less than a mile from the U.S. Embassy. Heavy machine gun and camon fire could be heard by persons in the Intercontinental Hotel next to Somoza's headquarters and sounded "quite loud" at the embassy, a source there said.

Officers with the convoy said its troop-carrying halftrack, two armored cars, four trucks and one jeep were carrying about 40 heavily armed men to the northwest when they were fired on by a substantial number of guerrillas.

Jeeploads of guardsmen with automatic weapons surrounded the hotel and Somoza's bunker complex as darkness fell.

Earlier Monday the Nicaraguan government charged that a Panamanian air force plane landed in northern Costa Rica and unloaded equipment and guerrillas fighting to oust Somoza.

The charge, carried direct from Somoza's office in Managua by a local radio station, did not say when the aircraft allegedly landed in Costa Rica or give any evidence. Costa Rican Minister of Security Juan Jose Echeverria denied the accusation.

In Mozambique

Rhodesians hit rebel camp

SALISBURY, June 5 (R) — Zimbabwe Rhodesian planes and ground troops have attacked a guerrilla camp in neighboring Mozambique, killing a number of guerrillas and Mozambican soldiers, a military headquarters communique has said.

The communique Monday said the forces hit a staging and supply depot of the Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army (ZANLA) of Robert Mugabe at Chivinge in western Tete province.

It was the first reported attack on guerrilla bases abroad under the new black-dominated government of Bishop Abel Muzorewa, who took over last week.

Thief gets more than just a car

VEREENIGING, South Africa June 5 (AP) — An alleged car thief got more than he bargained for when he stole a van parked behind the local hospital. It contained a corpse of a patient destined for the funeral home.

The van driver called police, who quickly located the van and its new driver. He told police he had just bought the van. When the police pointed at the corpse, he told them that he had bought it too. The man was not identified.
